

Elementary School Reading Competition

Sponsored by:

Rules

The winning student is the student who reads the most books. The winning class is the class with the most books read. The winning classroom and the winning student do not have to be from the winning school

The winning school is determined by the point system below.

1. 50 POINTS for the school whose students read the most books
2. 1 POINT per each percentage point of students participating (i.e., 10 points for 10% of students, up to 100 points for 100% of students participating)
3. 100 POINTS for the highest average number of books read per student
Will be calculated by the total of all books read by the school divided by the number of total students who participated.
4. 1 POINT for every PBS related book read

BOOK REQUIREMENTS:

Every student is required to read at least one PBS related book. The student must list the name of the book and its author on their student log. If a student reads a chapter book, 100 pages is counted as 1 book. More advanced readers are required to watch an episode of one of our PBS programs, like NOVA or Nature, and read a book related to the episode. The student must indicate the name of the PBS program on their student log, including the name of the book and its author. Incomplete student logs will be disqualified. The student's log will not be counted if it does not meet all of the requirements.

PRIZE INFORMATION:

The winning school receives a trophy. The winning student will receive a special prize. NEW THIS YEAR: The teacher from the winning classroom will receive classroom supplies + the class will receive a pizza party.
