

The Seedless

APPLE

Illustrated By :

Jeenal V Panchariv

Once upon a time, there was an apple. But not just any apple, it was an apple without seeds!

He thought he was special.

The next day he asked other apples if he could play with them. But they said 'no'

you don't have seeds, you are different.

The apple was sad. He went back home and told his Mom about the incident.

His Mom replied 'no matter what others say, you are very special. Believe in yourself.

Next day, he went outside after school. He asked the other apples if he could play with them. The other apple squinted and said 'NO!' The seedless apple composed himself this time and asked 'Just because I don't have seeds you are not letting me play.

But do you think you all are same? You there, 'you don't have a stem. You are little smaller than the one standing next to you. Does that make you different?

No! That makes you unique.

Remember, we all are apples.

That's what matters.

They understood their mistake and said sorry and they all started playing together.

Moral: It doesn't matter

if we are seedless or stemless apples, always remember we all are apples!

THE APPLE END