

THE BOY WHO UNDERSTOOD THE EAGLE
BY GRAYSON ZAPEL

There was a boy named James at school. He was at recess. An eagle stopped and said to the boy, "What's up?"

"The eagle can talk!" said the boy to his friend, Mikey, who he had just met.

James could understand the eagle, but no one else could understand the eagle. So, the other kids just laughed at James and said he was crazy.

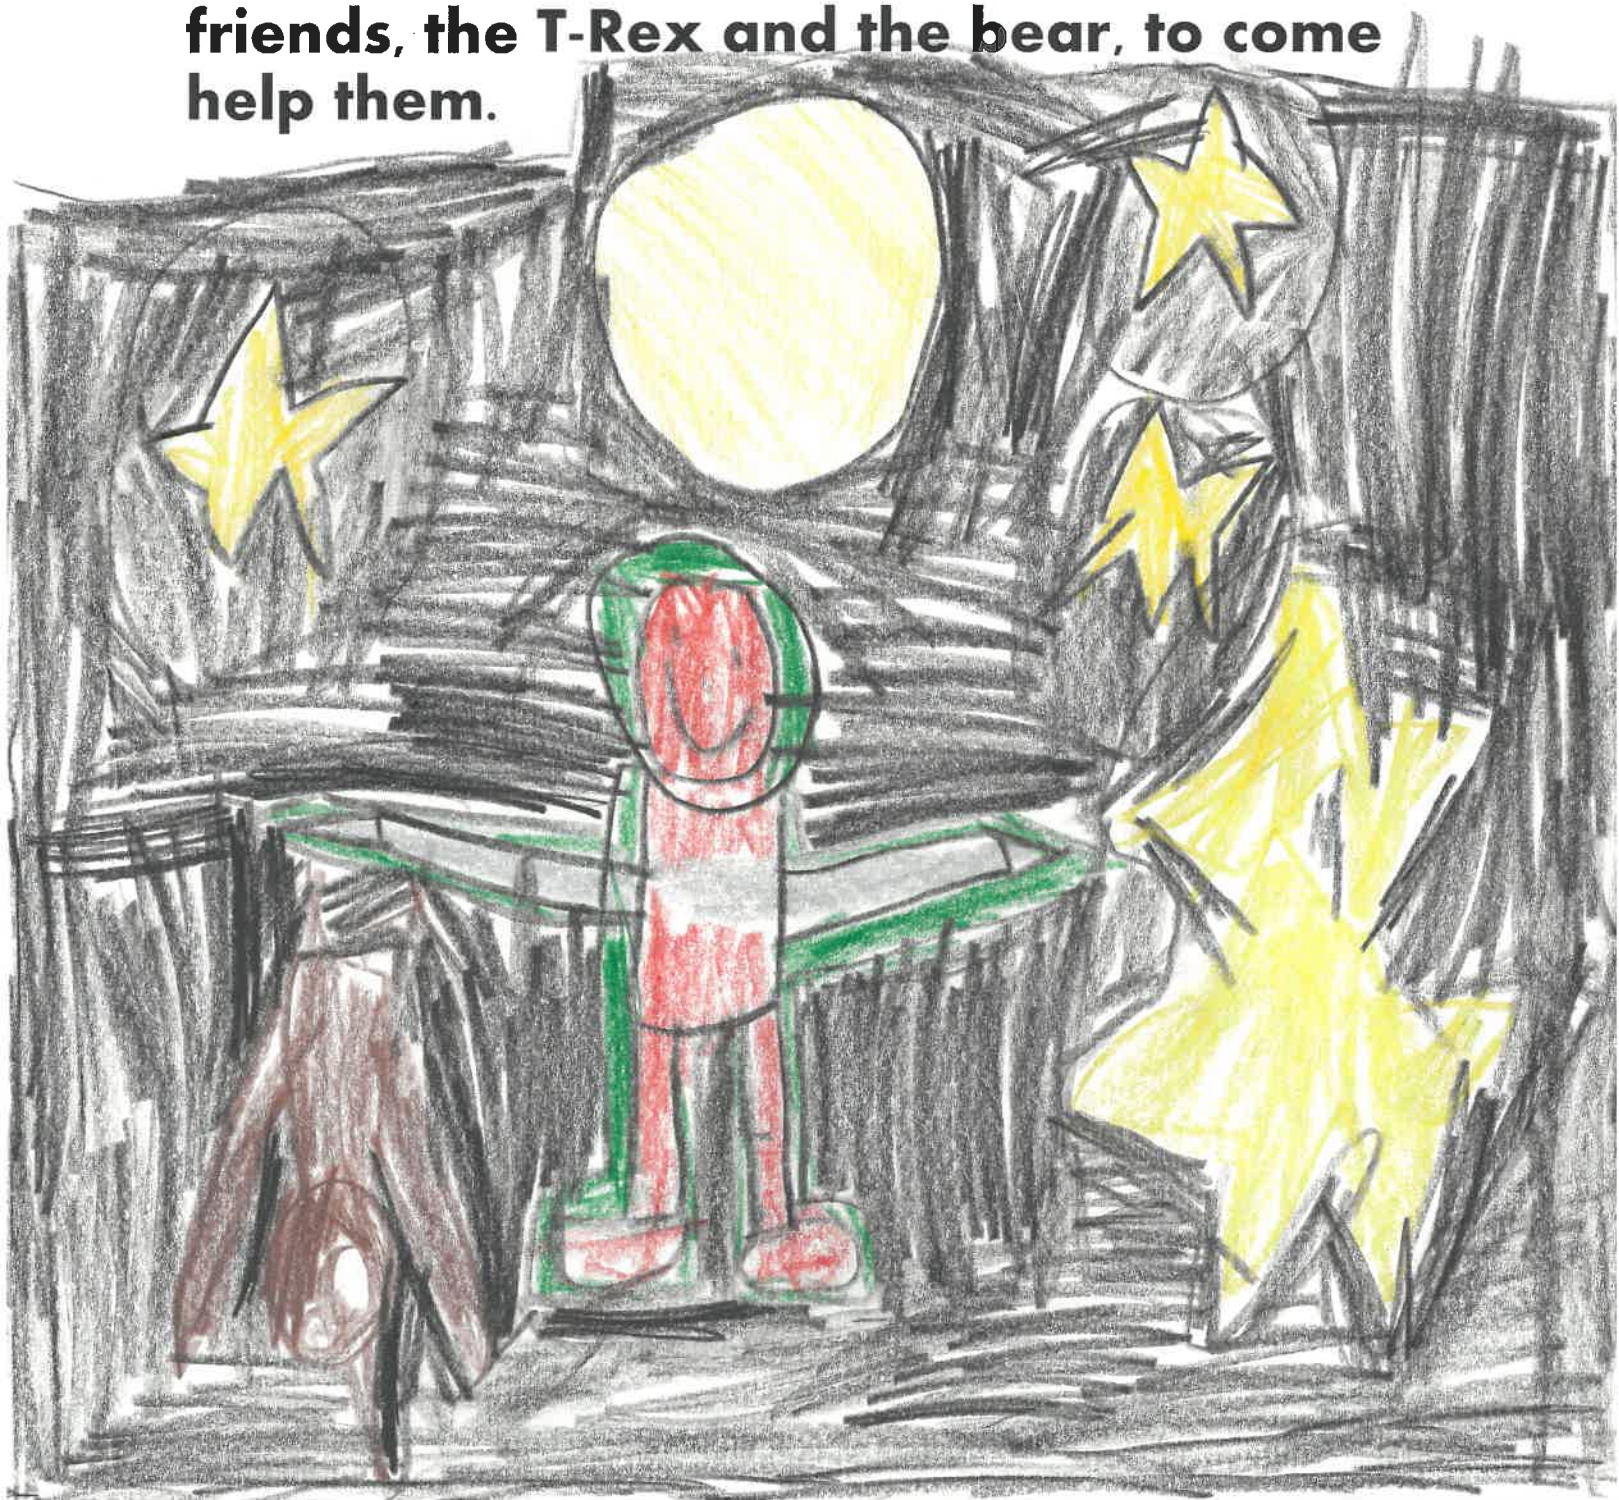

James was so sad, he wanted to run away. The eagle tried to make him feel better. He said, "I will carry you to a rocket ship, so you can fly to outer space and get away from the mean kids." So, they left.

When they got to the rocket ship, James to put on a space suit and they went out into space.

They ran out of fuel right when they were about to land on the moon. So, the eagle flew down to earth to tell his friends, the T-Rex and the bear, to come help them.

His friends put on their jet packs and flew into space. They brought an extra jet pack for James, and they all flew back to earth.

The boys heard about the eagle helping James and they were never mean to him again. The End
