

The Greedy Witch

By Catherine Ozepy

Once upon a time there was a greedy witch named Brenda. She wanted everything, but the thing she wanted the most was the King's kingdom. She had tried taking over other times, but it didn't work.

This time Brenda knew her plan was going to work. Brenda knew what she was going to do. She was going to make a potion to make the king fall in love with her. Then, she could make him give the kingdom to her.

So, the witch started making the potion. Then, she used her dark magic and shape shifted into the most beautiful woman.

She went to the castle and poured the magic potion into a cup. She put the guards to sleep and snuck into the castle.

When she got into the castle, she found the king sitting on his throne. She introduced herself and made up a name for herself. She told him that the chef told her to bring him a special drink. She gave the drink to the king. The potion worked!

She asked the king for the kingdom, and he said “YES, my love!” but Brenda forgot that the potion lasted only for a couple of minutes. Soon it started to fade away and the king sent Brenda to the dungeon.

The king let her out in a few years and then banned her from the entire kingdom. She learned not to be so greedy!

The king never took a drink from anyone again except from his trusted chef.

The End

I'm going to that Kingdom!

(She was still greedy!